EARTHWORKS

2018 TOP ACCOMPLISHMENTS

PHOTOS, TOP - DOWN: A threatened fjord in Vevring, Norway. On site with our optical gas imaging camera in Texas. Lakshmi Narayan (L) from Pune, India and Myrna Dominguez (R) from Manila, Philippines with Jennifer Krill on their Stopping Plastic Where It Starts speaking tour.

Protected Oceans from Mine Waste Dumping – Citigroup and Standard Chartered announced that they would stop financing the risky practice of dumping mine waste into oceans. The archaic process does not belong in modern mining and poses serious risks to fisherfolk, communities, and the environment.

Protected the Cabinet Mountains – For the first time, Montana initiated enforcement of the “Bad Actor” law to prevent Hecla’s CEO from obtaining new mining permits – because he failed to clean up past operations.

Exposed an Air Pollution Loophole – The California Air Resources Board (CARB) audited a key district’s loophole-riddled pollution credit system after our report, Undeserved Credit: Why emissions banking in California’s San Joaquin Valley puts air quality at risk exposed how companies were abusing it. Any resulting changes could give California’s San Joaquin Valley respite from rampant ozone and particle pollution from oil and gas drilling.

Protected Core Federal Environmental Laws and Regulations – The mining lobby attempted to eviscerate community and environmental oversight of their industry with a proposed rider to the defense bill in Congress that would have allowed federal agencies to forego National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) compliance for virtually any type of mining operation. The rider was removed after our campaign – a huge victory in the face of unprecedented Trump administration environmental rollbacks.

Took Aim at Proposed Alaskan Mine Investors – The proposed Pebble Mine was dealt a major blow when First Quantum Minerals backed out of their deal with Northern Dynasty Minerals to construct the mine. The proposed mine threatens Alaska’s Bristol Bay, home to the largest sockeye salmon fishery in the world.

REVEALING THE OIL AND GAS THREAT

We've revamped our Community Empowerment Project website with new information and updated maps, making it easier than ever to find pollution in your community, follow complaints filed with regulators, hear stories from people on the front lines, and contact us about coming to your community.

Explore the revamped website at Earthworks.org/CEP

YOU MADE THIS POSSIBLE IN 2018

- 501 sites visited (367 unique sites)
- 11 states visited
- 175 complaints filed with regulators
 - 23% of cases of reduced pollution
 - 43% prompted responses from regulators

POWERFUL REPORTS

Earthworks' 2018 reports have educated lawmakers and citizens, shaping the discussion through powerful research and analysis.
